On June 24 The Standard-Republican ublished in the thriving town of Car rollton. Ohio, issued a commercial edition, enumerating the various places of business and the many advantages of Carrollton. The edition is quite like all other such publications and displayed excellently the superior qualities of the brought to a high standard by two energetic and enterprising ladies and a short history of its growth will prove interest ing. Some eight or ten years ago the husband of Mrs. L. V. H. Baker, who conducted a small store in that place, died, leaving her almost practically without the means for maintaining the business started. A quantity of goods were ev en then at the depot, and in a few month payment would be due. The goods came from Charles Broadway Rouss, well known to us. The lady and her sister Miss Corinth Harsh, wrote to him, stat ing the situation and asking if he would place confidence in their efforts to dispose of the stock. With his never-failing generosity Mr. Rouss replied that he would trust them implicitly and if more teems him as her benefactor. Whenever she visits New York to purchase good she is a welcome visitor to his home. This is one instance where women's pluck and energy have reaped a rich reward. [Winchester Star.
